Total Health Spa

The Chi Machine®

Have you ever been to a spa, or experienced a professional massage? It is amazing how the right amount of pressure can relieve aches and pains, relax muscles, reduce tension and improve blood circulation. One of the key benefits is that the gentle motion of a massage results in the improvement of the flow of oxygen to and from the lungs, while enhancing the oxygen in the bloodstream.

Did you know without sufficient oxygen, serious medical conditions such as immune system dysfunction, sleep disorder or other severe health issues may occur?

After 38 years of research, Dr. Shizuo Inoue, the former President of the Japan Oxygen Foundation, developed a product that increases oxygenation without stress or effort.

The Chi Machine gives a passive therapeutic massage that...

- Enhances cellular metabolism
- Balances the spine
- Improves the immune system
- Activates the lymphatic system
- Increases blood production
- Restores balance to the autonomic nervous system
- Stimulates the internal organs

In terms of oxygenation, 15 minutes of massage with The Chi Machine is comparable to the equivalent of a 90 minute brisk walk. Since over 90% of energy comes from oxygen (only 10% is provided through food), doesn't it make sense to provide your body with a relaxing way to improve oxygen flow.

The HotHouse™ (Far Infrared Rays)

Many people wake up daily with muscle inflammation and soreness from common activities, which may have taken place days earlier. They also wonder if there is a way to reduce the effects of the pain before it becomes unbearable.

The HotHouse, an exclusive HTE product, produces its unique effect through the heat of Far Infrared (FIR) rays, and with its distinctive arched design, the unit enhances the effect of the thermal heat within the targeted area.

The HotHouse...

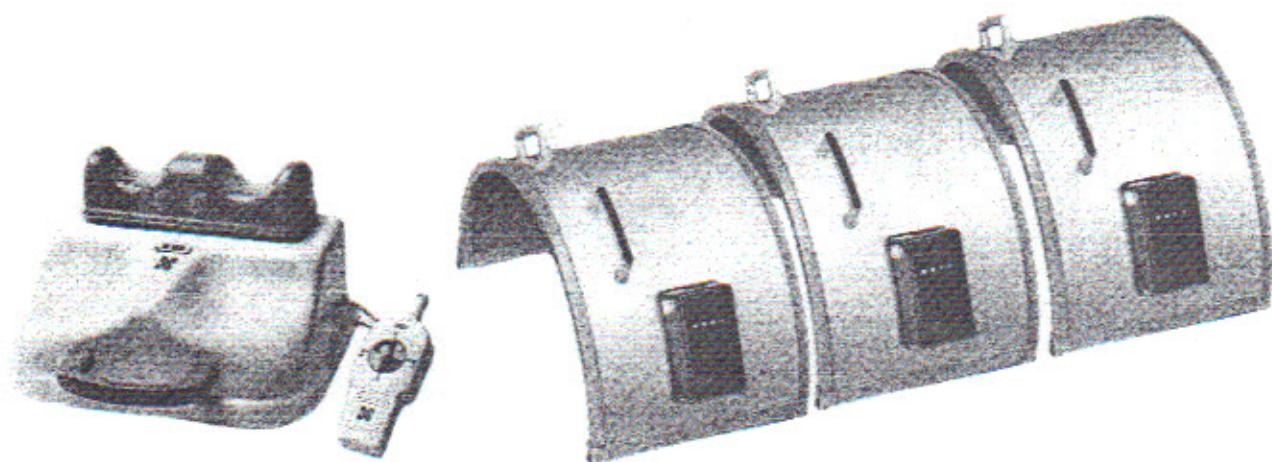

- Increases blood flow by promoting expansion in the capillaries
- Decreases muscle spasms and soreness
- Reduces swelling and inflammation by improving lymphatic flow
- Removes toxins

FIR rays are the most beneficial rays produced by the sun. FIR rays are not visible to the naked eye but can be felt as heat. The HotHouse releases an 8-10 micron FIR ray into the body, creating a vibration, allowing your body to work more efficiently. These vibrations allow toxins to be released back into the bloodstream and removed naturally by your body.

Benefits of The Chi Machine

Cellular Activation

The Chi Machine stimulates the autonomic nervous system, which opens the bronchioles of the lungs. Increased exchange of oxygen between the lungs and the blood stream oxygenates cells. This results in increased cellular metabolism and systemic oxygenation.

Restores Balance in the Autonomic Nervous System

When the autonomic nervous system is not in balance, insomnia, digestive problems, palpitations, anxiety, constipation, neurasthenia, aches and pains, mental stress, and numerous other ailments may surface. The Chi Machine helps restore balance to the autonomic nervous system.

Improving the Immune System

The Chi Machine stimulates globulin production, which increases the body's immune defense system.

Blood Production

The machine's action on the spine stimulates the autonomic nervous system, increasing bone marrow production, oxygenation and healing.

Spinal Balancing

Human spinal design permits lateral twisting and snake-like movement that serves to relieve vertebral joint pressure and promotes a sense of well being. Adults seldom utilize this design feature. Consequently, adults accumulate stress and tension in the body. (Watch a baby stretch and twist in its crib. This is a natural human movement that relaxes and creates energy.)

Exercising Internal Organs

Eastern traditions focus on healing through increasing energy flow to organ systems. The Chinese refer to this energy as 'chi'. The Chi Machine aids in unblocking energy pathways and raising the level of functioning of the internal organs with its gentle massaging motion.

PLEASE NOTE THE FOLLOWING:

Breaks down plaque in the blood

Increases good cholesterol, gets rid of bad cholesterol

Strengthens and limbers the body

Burns calories and helps you lose weight

Tightens and tones the muscles

Releases toxins from fat tissues

For diabetics, it increases circulation in poorly circulated areas.

Realigns the spine

Reduces lymph stagnation and enhances removal of waste from the body.

A Different Paradigm

by Nathan L. Lipton, M.D., F.A.A.O

The predominant type of medicine we have in North America, as well as in other countries, is referred to as Western or allopathic medicine. It is also the best in the world. We are blessed to be living here so we can benefit from this advanced form of medical care. When people of means who live elsewhere in the world get sick—they will seek out medical care in North America or in one of the other many countries around the world that offer this approach.

The paradigm characterizing this type of medicine is as follows: for a specific disease - we use a specific therapy, typically medication. Thus the treatments are disease-specific. So if we have Diabetes we will use insulin or an oral agent such as Glucophage. If we have another disease such as Arthritis - insulin or Glucophage will be of no use. We have to use a drug that is specific for Arthritis.

However there is another paradigm, which can be exemplified by The Chi Machine for example. In my experience with hundreds of patients - using The Chi Machine has proven therapeutically beneficial for the following conditions:

- Ankylosing Spondylitis
- Arthritis
- Chronic Fatigue Syndrome
- Depression
- Emphysema
- Fibromyalgia
- Lymphoedema Degenerative Disc Disease of the Lumbar and Cervical Spine
- Multiple Sclerosis
- Muscular Dystrophy
- Obesity
- Parkinson's Disease
- Peripheral Neuropathy, etc., etc., etc.

How is this possible? How can a single therapy help so many diverse conditions? This simply doesn't fit our Western medical paradigm. The answer to the question "How can The Chi Machine help so many different conditions?" is as follows.

The Chi Machine empowers the body to heal whatever pathology it is afflicting. The human body was designed and built by God in heaven- the greatest architect and creator of all. The good Lord also built into our human anatomy an energy source-which is called different names by various cultures.

The Asian culture calls it Qi or Chi. The East Indian culture labels it Prana. In Jewish terminology, the term is one that is very similar to the word Chi; that word is Chai. No matter the name used, they all refer to the same phenomenon.

This Chi energy exists in every human being as a dormant, latent or potential energy source. Often this energy is present flowing at a very low level, but it is possible to manifest or activate this energy: When this is done-two things happen:

1. We feel wonderful.
2. Healing of virtually any disease is possible in an accelerated fashion.

The trick is how to stimulate or activate our Chi energy. The great genius of Dr. Inoue was his invention of a mechanical device--namely the Chi Machine as an easy, enjoyable and effortless way to get the Chi energy flowing. All of us who use and love The Chi Machine know exactly what I am referring to here.

The Chi Machine-in an almost magical fashion-is able to instantly power up the Chi energy force in our bodies. I have had some patients-the very first time they use The Chi Machine-describe that their entire body is vibrating when it stops moving. For many it is very profound. And the therapeutic results are often extraordinary. This is the power of The Chi Machine. All of us who have been working with The Chi Machine-using it ourselves and introducing it to others, are acquainted with incredible even miraculous healings that have been achieved with The Chi Machine.

As a physician I never cease to be amazed at what The Chi Machine is capable of as a treatment device. The greatest joy in life is to help others. Nothing else even comes close. It is so wonderful to be able to get relief. The worst thing is for someone to be suffering from a condition unnecessarily - because they simply don't know about an effective treatment that is available. Most people have never heard of The Chi Machine. Our mandate then is to be of service to others by continuing to spread the word about the amazing Chi Machine.

Nathan L. Lipton, M.D., F.A.A.O. is board certified in ophthalmology. He completed his residency at the University of Toronto, where he won the Woywitka Award for Outstanding Resident. He has been in practice in Dallas, Texas since 1979 and has published numerous articles in professional journals. He specializes in lasik vision correction and uses The Chi Machine and the HotHouse to relax his patients preoperatively. His mission is to accelerate the acceptance of The Chi Machine and HotHouse among health care professionals everywhere.

Chi & HotHouse Testimonies

Dear HTE USA™;

I am a 72 year old medical doctor and psychiatrist who has used The Chi Machine® now for about a week. Prior to this I have availed myself of the usual prescribed medical therapies and medications.

My symptoms were:

1. Chronic back and neck pain due to ankylosing spondylitis, a form of rheumatoid arthritis where the spine becomes fused and rigid. This started 35 years ago.
2. Chronic fatigue for 5 years, with lack of physical energy, where many little daily things were difficult to do.
3. Sleep disturbances because of the pain.

What the machine did for me was the following. My back and neck pain did not control my life anymore. The chronic fatigue disappeared surprisingly after 5 days and I have no trouble doing things anymore. Sleep is comfortable without continuously having to find a painless sleeping position. It seems that my bed and I are friends again. Last, but not least, the feeling of well being and normalcy only remembered from younger years has returned.

I used the Chi Machine® twice a day. One day, I only got one treatment and felt the difference. Frequent experiences after a treatment were as if I just had a good workout, or as if I were in a spa. Putting on my socks and shoes were easier. Considering that, as a beginner, each treatment lasted only 5 minutes, for the ratio of times spent and duration of benefits received, it was not a difficult decision to purchase the machine.

Thank you HTE™.

Sincerely,
Richard Vodegel, MD

Dear HTE USA™;

It has helped me walk, and also has made my back better. The stiffness is gone out of my neck and back. When I am tired from standing on my feet I get on the machine for 15 minutes and the pain is all gone in my legs and knees. It is certainly worth the money.

I am 88 years old and the Chi Machine® has worked miracles!

Combo Provides Asthma Relief!

All my life I have suffered from regular, and often acute, asthma attacks. In my case, the relief gained by using prescription remedies is temporary and often accompanied by side effects, mainly a wicked headache and dizziness. The temporary nature of relief provided to me by the use of prescription drugs has been most frustrating because of the unattractive choice left for me. Take a dangerous dosage of a powerful drug cocktail far more often than prescribed and suffer the side effects.

I had all but given up on this situation changing, when I was introduced to the Chi Machine a few months ago. Shortly after starting this new exercise I could feel my air passages start to relax and I was able to clear a lot of congestion by coughing. By the time I completed that first ten minute session, I was hooked because my airways were as clear as they had ever been in recent memory. I continued to use the Chi Machine twice daily and was amazed to discover that many days I did not require medication, the prescribed amount always did the trick. After two months of using the Chi Machine regularly, I have seen a huge improvement with infrequent and comparatively mild attacks, which respond well to medication. Side effects are still there but have greatly reduced.

Ah, but what happened the day I had an asthma attack and discovered I'd misplaced my inhaler is the real story! Just by fluke, our HotHouse had arrived on that same fateful day. I decided to use the Chi Machine and the HotHouse together as recommended just to see if it would help a bit till I found my inhaler. Within seconds of beginning dual therapy I could feel my sinuses begin to drain and within a couple of minutes I was able to clear my bronchioles and breath much more freely. By the time that fifteen minute session was complete I was totally clear of asthma, as in no wheeze, no rattle of phlegm, and no tightness whatsoever. No drug, or combination of drugs I have ever used has cleared up my asthma so completely.

Thank you HTE.

Treating PMS without Side Effects

A cream containing natural progesterone from wild yam is safer than conventional pharmaceuticals

By David Steinman

DOCTORS TODAY prescribe a synthetic form of the female hormone progesterone for women with menstrual problems, osteoporosis, and menopausal symptoms. In spite of the known side effects and risks associated with taking synthetic progesterone, most doctors believe that the benefits generally outweigh the risks.

The risks, though, are not inconsequential. In addition to unpleasant side effects such as fluid retention and salt build-up, synthetic progesterone is known to cause some serious illnesses - blood clots and uterine and breast cancers.

Some women today are discovering, however, that they don't have to take synthetic progesterone. A natural - and safer - form of progesterone is readily available and is effective in relieving the symptoms for which synthetic progesterone is prescribed.

Marsha Sampson is a 40-year-old woman who switched from the synthetic to a natural progesterone. For her unpredictable menstrual cycle - which had included wild mood swings and irritability - Sampson's physician prescribed the synthetic progesterone called Provera to help regulate her cycle. But the side effects were unacceptable to Sampson.

"Using Provera made me so nervous, my heart began to palpitate," she says. "At first I thought my doctor had prescribed speed."

Sampson consulted an acupuncturist, who recommended that she take the progesterone found in an extract of the wild yam plant. The acupuncturist gave her a cream containing the extract and told her to rub it into the soft parts of her body - on her belly and thighs and under her arms - right up to the time her period began.

"After using wild yam for three months, I was shocked," Sampson says. "I sailed right through my period. It was phenomenal. And my cycle became regular - every 30 days."

Wild yam's medicinal properties have actually been known for a long time by folk herbalists and pharmaceutical manufacturers. Daniel Mowrey reported in The Scientific Validation of Herbal Medicine (Keats Publishing, 1986) that throughout the 18th and 19th centuries wild yam was used to treat menstrual cramps and problems related to childbirth.

In 1936, Japanese scientists discovered that a species of wild yam growing in the south of Mexico contained a chemical called diosgenin, which is remarkably similar to progesterone. For a number of years following this discovery,

Mexican wild yam was a primary source for the production of progesterone and other hormones. Until recently, wild yam - not to be confused with the tuberous sweet potato yam - was the sole source of the diosgenin used in making contraceptive pills. According to herbalist Rosemary Gladstar in Herbal Healing for Women (Simon & Schuster, 1993), wild yam is "the most widely used herb in the world today." Over 200 million prescriptions that contain its derivatives are sold each year.

Although many physicians believe that there is no significant difference between synthetic and natural progesterones, others, such as New York City obstetrician Neils Lauersen, disagree. Lauersen says that some synthetic progesterones can have masculinizing effects on a woman, while others cause fluid retention. "Natural progesterone (from the wild yam), on the other hand, does not cause masculinization, and it is known to reduce sodium and fluid retention," says Lauersen, the author of PMS: Premenstrual Syndrome and You (Simon & Schuster, 1983).

John Lee, M.D., of Sebastopol, California, says that the reason synthetic progesterone causes side effects is because "it's not progesterone. The pharmaceutical companies alter the molecular structure so it no longer fits into the bio-chemical machinery of the body."

The progesterone taken from the wild yam, on the other hand, is nearly identical to what the body produces, Lee says. And the body easily converts it into the identical molecule. That is not the case with the synthetic compound.

Wild yam has proved useful to women whose progesterone production has declined naturally, during menopause. For example, it prevents and heals osteoporosis, the disfiguring and potentially fatal brittle-bone disease. Osteoporosis becomes most severe following menopause, when women's bodies stop producing progesterone; Lee and many other doctors say progesterone is the key to maintaining healthy bones (Despite the oft-heard advice that women take estrogen "replacement").

Lee has observed and treated 100 post-menopausal women, many of whom had lost height, a sign of osteoporosis. Many also had suffered one or more fractures, Lee reported in the July 1990 issue of International Clinical Nutrition Review.

Lee used bone density tests to measure the effectiveness of natural progesterone. "It was common to see a 10 percent increase (in bone density) in the first six to 12 months and an annual increase of three to five percent until stabilizing at the levels of healthy 35-year-olds," Lee says. "Neither age nor time from menopause was an apparent factor. The faster increases occurred in those with the lowest initial bone densities."

Lee adds, "The occurrence of osteoporotic fractures dropped to zero."

Lee's results run counter to current medical thinking about osteoporosis. "The results of this study suggests that osteoporosis is not an irreversible condition," he says. "Reversal has been demonstrated by the bone density tests and by the clinical results. This cannot be said of any other conventional therapy for osteoporosis."

Of equal importance, Lee says, supplementation with wild yam is safe. It imposes no increased risk of cardiovascular disease, breast cancer, or endometrial cancer, he says, and it has no side effects.

Most studies report that the cream or oil is most effective. This is because the progesterone is absorbed through the skin and directly enters the bloodstream, whereas tablets or capsules are broken down in the stomach before they can be absorbed into the bloodstream.

The cost of herbal progesterone is approximately $30 to $80 a month.

The Value of Progesterone

reviewed by Jule Klotter

Natural Progesterone: The Multiple Role of a Remarkable Hormone
by John R. Lee, M.D.

Along with the myth that low-fat diets and the use of margarine are the key to avoiding heart disease lies another myth: women need estrogen replacement to avoid the side effects of menopause and to avoid osteoporosis. In his book, Natural Progesterone, Dr. John R. Lee gives a very clear explanation of the female hormone cycle and of the vital, and often overlooked, importance of natural progesterone.

After hearing a lecture by Dr. Ray Peat in 1978, Lee began recommending an over-the-counter natural progesterone skin moisturizer to menopausal osteoporotic patients who were unable to use estrogen because of a history of uterine or breast cancer. Over the years Lee accumulated much data from these patients, including dual photon absorptiometry (DPA) tests which showed an actual increase in bone density, rather than simply delayed loss, which is the effect of estrogen replacement. He found that other doctors, who would willingly use transdermal natural progesterone on wives and family members, were reluctant to recommend it to patients because it lacks the "official sanction" of the medical establishment. Because these doctors did not have a clear understanding of hormone physiology, they were unable to make independent, common sense decisions. He hopes his book will help remedy this situation.

Progesterone and progestins are not the same. Progesterone is made by the corpus luteum after ovulation. Although small amounts are also made by the adrenal glands, progesterone production virtually ends without ovulation. Estrogen, however, continues to be produced from androstenedione in fat cells even after menopause. Natural progesterone is the precursor of adrenal cortisol hormones (corticosteroids) and the entire group of estrogen hormones. It is found in placentas and in several plants, especially wild yams (Dioscorea). Progesterone prevents the shedding of the secretory endometrium (menses) after conception, thereby allowing the embryo to grow. It also prevents the undesirable effects of estrogens, such as decreased libido and increased susceptibility to breast fibrocysts, uterine fibroids, uterine (endometrial) cancer, and breast cancer. Progesterone increases the body's sensitivity to estrogen, so less estrogen is needed.

Like progesterone, progestins sustain the human secretory endometrium, but their altered molecular structure makes them useless in the manufacturing of corticosteroids and may cause many side effects. Dr. Lee found no side effects with natural progesterone, but progestins can cause birth defects or abortion, fluid retention, epilepsy, migraine, asthma, cardiac or renal dysfunction, and depression. Manufacturers slightly alter the chemical makeup of progesterone in order to create a patentable product. The resulting progestins have atoms in unusual positions that prevent their being metabolized, prolong their activity and create effects that differ from natural progesterone. Lee wants women to know that the "'hormone balancing' being done to them uses synthetic and abnormal versions of the real goods when the natural hormones are available, safer, and more appropriate to their bodies."

Lee explains that many conditions experienced by women, such as fibrocystic breasts, uterine fibroids, bone loss, and PMS, are largely the result of progesterone deficiency and estrogen dominance. In western countries, women in their 30's often have anovulatory menstrual cycles; they do not ovulate even though they menstruate. Without ovulation, no progesterone is made to offset the production of estrogen and prevent its negative effects. Lee attributes this imbalance primarily to the western diet: "In cultures whose diets are rich in fresh vegetables of all sorts, progesterone deficiency does not exist. Not only do the women of these cultures have healthy ovaries with healthy follicles... at menopause, their diets provide sufficient progestogenic substances to keep their libido high, their bones strong, and their passage through menopause uneventful and symptom-free. Our food supply system uses many processed foods and foods picked days before being sold."

In his book, Lee discusses the use of natural progesterone in treating fibroid tumors, mild to moderate endometriosis, symptoms of PMS—which are remarkably similar to estrogen side effects—and, especially its use in treating osteoporosis. Women with progesterone deficiency exhibit bone loss in their 30's before menopause when estrogen levels are still high; but, we keep hearing that "estrogen is the single most potent factor in prevention of bone loss." The perpetuation of this myth is yet another "victory of advertising over science." Estrogen merely delays bone loss, and its effects decreases after 3-5 years. Progesterone increases bone density.

Lee notes that several factors contribute to osteoporosis: too much protein, diuretics, antibiotics, lack of exercise, cigarettes, alcohol abuse, hyperthyroidism, and fluoride, which increases the risk of fracture. To reverse osteoporosis, Lee prescribes natural progesterone cream, a diet that emphasizes vegetables and grains to obtain calcium and magnesium for bone mineralization, mineral and vitamin supplements, and modest exercise.

Lee's final chapter gives physicians details on using natural progesterone in treating patients with osteoporosis, fibrocystic breasts, PMS, ovarian cysts, uterine fibroids, and cervical erosions and/or dysplasia. All of his recommendations are backed by the most informative and lucid explanation of the female hormone cycle that I've encountered. Natural Progesterone: The Multiple Roles of a Remarkable Hormone contains priceless information for women wrestling with the effects of menopause and hormone imbalance and for the doctors who treat them.

What is happening to this planet? What is happening to us?

A rubber band can take your life...

In the 21st century, with advanced technology comes advanced health problems. While this fast-paced world continues to come up with more innovative ways to make our lives more convenient, our health continues to suffer in the process. We want things done fast and efficiently. With today's hectic schedules, fast food chains have become a convenience adding short term satisfaction yet bringing long term adverse health effects from additives, fried meals and poor quality foods. We find it harder to get a decent night's rest with our busy and dramatic schedules. The suffering economy is taking its toll on our overall stress levels and the combination of these calamities is greatly infecting our health, well being and quality of life. This can be compared to a rubber band wrapped tightly around a major artery. Sooner or later, circulation will discontinue and the result will be detrimental.

How can a rubber band take my life?

All of these factors produce a toxic buildup in the body. This is similar to what would happen if we tied a rubber band around an artery. Eventually we would lose circulation and the cells would die off. The more toxic buildup we collect over the years, the more bands we create... The body begins to suffer and becomes unable to protect itself against sickness and infectious diseases. A downward spiral...

How can I release these bands?

Our Multi Energy approach to health is designed to unblock these "rubber" bands by eliminating excess toxins and boosting the immune system. The culmination of these energies synergize and work together to create the best combination of techniques and methods to heal the body, slow down the aging process and make you feel your best all day, every day, for life!

Nutrition, Prevention and

Total Health Formula

Physicians recommend all kinds of changes in a patient's lifestyle... everything from weightloss to eating habits to exercise to quitting smoking. The problem, however, is compliance... really getting on track with a lifestyle that sustains health and vitality.

When people are busy, bad habits are hard to change. However, keeping people healthy and preventing disease is becoming more important in today's world. Recent studies point to two overwhelming realities. The first is that whole foods, not isolated vitamins, hold the key to good health and wellness. The second reality is that Enzymes are extremely important in fighting disease.

Why are Enzymes Important?

- Cooking destroys these "food enzymes", forcing the body to produce more of its own digestive enzymes that would otherwise be necessary to digest the food.
- The body has a lifetime "enzyme potential" for manufacturing digestive enzymes
- Enzymes in raw foods also carry the "life force"- Dr. Edward Howell, author of Enzyme Nutrition.

The Secret of Longevity - Enzymes

Enzymes regulate the normal process of digestion, absorption, detoxification, blood circulation, and waste removal - all essential to the very functions that make human life possible. Enzymes are not only the foundation of human life, they are fundamental to our HEALTH!

HTE is introducing our new product -

Advanced Electro Reflex Energizer™

MEDICAL DEVICE LICENCE# 66568
REGISTERED IN CANADA

The Advanced ERE is an instrument that helps reconnect broken or damaged electrical circuits within the body by stimulating it with the correct wave form, current and frequency. The Advanced ERE is not just a foot massager; it is effective at producing the ultimate feeling of relaxation, while balancing the body. The Advanced ERE also provides the option of using three sets of electro pads which can be used simultaneously with the foot massager. E-Power™

MEDICAL DEVICE LICENCE# 83555
REGISTERED IN CANADA

Why do we need to increase Electric Potential? Since there are 15-90 millivolts in a cell membrane in your body, and approximately sixty trillion (60,000,000,000,000) cells in the whole body, the total electric potential is a very considerable number. In addition, the electric potential in the human body reduces with age, and the reduction of electric potential can trigger illness. For this reason, it is necessary to increase the electrical potential to improve your health.

Features & Benefits:

E-Power was designed to provide Negative Potential Energy (Energy for Rest) with High Frequency Energy (more ATP). Using your body as a capacitor, E-Power generates 70 KHz of high frequency electrical waves creating an internal energy that will balance and revitalize you.

You should NOT use if you have a pacemaker, are menstruating, pregnant, or have a high fever.

Consult with your doctor before using the E-Power if you have any implants of gel or silicon, transplanted organs, heart problems or tumors.

Power Eyes™

Power Eyes combines air pressure, heat compression and vibrating massage which can benefit blood circulation around the eye area. This also is good for the metabolic process around the eyes and helps eliminate dark circles and fine lines. In addition, Power Eyes can help you achieve a good night's rest.

Features & Benefits:

- Eyeshade: Auto adjustment on eyeshade, conforms to the face (thin, wide, short, and long).
- Internal Low Pressure Air Bag: Safe and quiet low pressure air pump massages the eyes without excess pressure.
- Micro- Computer Digital Programming: Precise micro-computer programming allows for 5, 10, and 15 minute intervals for use.

- Air Pressure + Thermal Heat: Option to select different seismic vibration modes- Rub, Pinch, Press, and Auto (combination of all 3) with Air Pressure and Heat (temperatures range from 104°F-109 °F).

Consult with your doctor before using this product if you previously have had an eye operation, glaucoma, cataracts, etc.
